

Researching Education Policy: Ethnographic Experiences (Paperback)

By Geoff Troman, Dennis Beach

Tufnell Press, United Kingdom, 2006. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 227 x 149 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. This book draws on the work of three experienced ethnographers who have studied the effects of education policy on teachers work in the United Kingdom and Sweden. The book traces some of the issues and experiences in the development of ethnographic projects examining policy developments-from planning, through analysis and writing, to outcomes as methodological articles. Ethnographic research into teachers work seeks to understand educational and social change. As in other European countries, the UK education system has undergone massive restructuring since the late 1970s, with proliferating neo-liberal modes of regulation. Policy has had teachers as its focus for change, recently redefining and reworking teachers and teaching. There is a crucial role for an ethnographic case study approach to complement analyses of official educational policy. In general, the experiences, perspectives and emotions of the actors who implement policy, and the social, cultural, political, economic and emotional contexts in which they do so has been neglected. The ethnographic method is well placed to study these areas of social life since it investigates the perspectives and behaviours of people within, in this case, education...
