The Committee encouraged the Administration to engage in a constructive dialog with Congress to close the vast gulf in our rel-ative perspectives on the Corps Civil Works program and to set some clear priorities for the Corps. The Committee also encouraged the Administration to begin preparation of a long-term roadmap for the Civil Works program, so that Congress and the Administration can both see the current and future requirements of the Corps Civil Works program. The Administrations Fiscal Year 2005 budget request rejects both Committee requests. Therefore, in the absence of Administra-tion leadership on these issues, the Committee takes responsibility for providing constructive, albeit unilateral, responses to both chal-lenges. As outlined below, the Committee offers specific guidance on project priorities and on a long-range roadmap for the Corps Civil Works program. Project Priorities. - One of the perceived problems with the Civil Works program is that it represents a mere agglomeration of projects of interest to Congress and the Administration, with no rhyme nor reason underlying the selection of which projects receive funding. There is some truth to this perception, and the Congress bears part of the responsibility for this situation. With the excep-tion of a few programmatic components of the Civil Works program, such as the regulatory and research and development activi-ties, most of what the Corps does relates to individual water re-sources projects. These may be large multi-state watershed projects or small local flood control projects, but they are all projects that lie in the districts of one or more Members. As a consequence, the Committee has in the past tried to satisfy Member interests by adding an ever-increasing list of projects to each Energy...
