J. B. H. HEAT. 463. Chemical Reactions at Low Temperatures. R. Pictet. (Chem. Ztg. 19. pp. 425-426, 1895.)--This paper contains some further results obtained by the author on the behaviour of gases at very low temperatures. He finds that nitric oxide at--120 no longer combines with the oxygen of the air, and, further, that a mixture of chlorine and hydrogen will not explode under the action of magnesium light, even at--25. Finally, that chlorine and sulphurous acid lose their bleaching-action at--60. G.H. Ba. 464. Zermelo s Thermodynamics. It. Boltzmann. (Wied. Ann. 57. pp. 773-784, 1896.)--Prof. Boltzmann has several times enunciated the view that Maxwell s Law of Partition of Energy is in no sense a dynamical principle deducible from the equations of motion, but is rather to be regarded as a theorem in probability, the distribution in question being the most probable distribution, and in such systems of molecules as are supposed to constitute a gas, the probability of such a distribution preponderating overwhelmingly over that of any other distribution. In a paper entitled Ueber einer Satz der Dynamik und die mechanische Warmetheorie, Herr Zermelo has shown that Prof. Boltzmann s views have not been clearly understood, and he now tries to make the matter clearer.--Herr Zermelo had attempted to apply a certain proposition due to Poincare to the Kinetic Theory of Gases, but Prof. Boltzmann points out that this application is incorrect. From the context, we infer...
